

From the Editors

This volume brings together 33 articles representing the variety and quality of the nearly 200 sessions that took place at the 4th Extensive Reading World Congress, which was held August 4-7, 2017 at Toyo Gakuen University in Tokyo, Japan, chaired by Thomas Robb and Atsuko Takase.

While the authors of these articles get the lion's share of credit for the research and reflection that has gone into these articles, we would like to acknowledge that this volume and each article in it are the result of a collective effort of dedicated volunteers. First of all, we would like to thank all the blind reviewers, whose critical evaluations helped identify strengths and weaknesses, and point out areas for improvement in the initial submissions. Next, copy editors worked on each article that is included here, and in many cases worked closely with the authors to achieve greater clarity and accuracy. Proofreaders looked closely at each article both before and after layout to spot errors that inevitably find their way into even the best written articles. The layout editor converted each article from a basic text document, arranged any tables or figures, and made sure each article fit into place in the whole volume. We believe that we have put together a volume of easily read, informative articles useful for anyone interested in extensive reading pedagogy and research. Thank you to the whole team who has made this volume possible.
